THE IRISH QUESTION.

VARIOUS ASPECTS OF THE AGITATION. A THREAT TO DESTROY A DEANERY-THE ATTACK ON LADY FLORENCE DIXIE-REPLYING TO MR. EGAN-INDICTED BY THE GRAND JURY,

The Dean of Canterbury has received a letter containing a threat to blow up the deanery.

The Irish members of Parliament intend to for an inquiry as to the assault on Lady Florence Dixie. Talks with several Irishmen in this city relative to the attack are given. Mr. Mayne, a Parnellite, has been declared elected to the House of Commons from Tipperary, as the successor of John Dillon. Mr. Pigott, Editor of The Irishman, denies certain charges made by Mr. Egan. The latter yesterday explained further the object of his visit to America. Thirteen members of the Armagh Assassination Society have been indicted by the Grand Jury.

THREATENING TO BLOW UP A DEANERY. LONDON, March 20.—The Dean of Canterbury has received a letter, the writer of which threatens that the Deanery will be blown up on the occasion of the enthronement of the new Archbishop.

THE ATTACK ON LADY FLORENCE DIXIE. LONDON, March 20 .- In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir William Harcourt, Home Secretary, replying to a question by Captain O'shea, said that the police were carefully inquiring into the assault on Lady Florence Dixie. This inquiry was made owing to the intention of the Parnellite members to press for an investigation, because of the suspicions cast upon the Land League in connection

DUBLIN, March 20 .- Judge Lawson, replying to an address presented by the Grand Jury of Berfast, said he attributed the explosions in London and the attack on Lady Florence Dixie to "the final efforts of the scotched reptile lawlessness."

ELECTED TO SUCCEED JOHN DILLON. TIPPERARY, March 20 .- Mr. Mayne, a Parnellite, has been declared elected a member of the House of Commons for Tipperary, because of the informal nomination of his opponent. The vacancy was caused by the resignation of John Dillon.

EGAN'S CHARGE REFUTED BY PIGOTT. DUBLIN, March 20.-Richard Pigott, proprietor of The Irishman, repudiates the statement of Patrick Egan that he (Mr. Pigott) wrote to him threatening that unless Mr. Egan gave him £300 he would accept an offer of £500 made by the Dublin Castle officials to publish in his paper an article charging the officers of the Land League with misappropriating funds subscribed to the League.

EGAN'S MISSION IN AMERICA. In referring yesterday to his recent visit to Tarrytown and Waterbury and the neighboring villages, Patrick Egan spoke of the surprise that he felt at the in-tensity of the Irish feeling that he everywhere found displayed. "I expected a good deal," he said to a TRIBUNE reporter. "I have been led to expect it, but I will confees that what I have seen surpasses anything I expected. If I were asked to specify more particularly, I would point out two things that especially struck me the first is the deadly hatred of England that the Irishmen here exhibit, and the next is the accurate knowledge possessed by the people respecting the progress of events at home. This latter feature is to me simply astonishing, and shows with what a close attention Ireland's efforts are being followed in America." "What do you argue from this i"

"It has immeasurably added to my hopes of ultimate success. I cannot believe that all this enthusiasm and

"I believe that while the Irish are ready in America to give a loyal support to a moral-force movement, they will be doubly ready to support a physical-force movement, if the opportunity occurs."

"In that case, do you consider the Lend League of America more awanced than that of Ireland?"

"I do, certainly. At the same time, I have found them perfectly disposed to follow the guidance of the leaders of the League in Ireland."

"Was it not one of your objects in coming here to confer with the American leagues in this matter?"

"Partly: I have of course, as a recent arrival, explained to the leading men here the situation in Ireland. It is the object of Parnell's approaching visit to the Philadelphia Convention to explain the situation at home further. We wish to bring about complete accord between the League at home and the leagues here. This was one of the subjects discussed with the Rev. Father Walsn at Waterbury, and at Buffalo it will be a matter to be considered by James Mooney and J. J. Hynes, these three forming the Council of the Land League in America. At Boston and Chicago, where I am going after I have been to Buffalo, I will see some other leading men in the land movement, and I hope we will have many views to exchange that will be mutually profitable."

"Is there any discord between the different leagues

ele."

"Is there any discord between the different leagues it organizations in America i"

"Oh, no. Still, they have never yet been brought comtely under one head. It is the present hope of the diers here to accomplish this, and to consolidate ally all the Irish societies in America into one movement."

Is this the object of calling together the convention "Is this the object of calling together the convention at Philadelphia i"
"It is certainly one of the main objects of that convention. We hope that the leagues in America will be brought into harmony, not only with each other but with the Irish Land League, and great good must certainly issue from a conference between Farnell and the American leaders."

"Is Parnell certainly coming?"
"Father Walsh, as secretary of the League, sent a cable dispatch to him from Waterbury requesting him to some."

come."
"Will you speak at Philadelphia I"
"I tuink not. I do not wish to appear on the platform, but if I left it my duty, I certainly should."
Mr. Egan left the city last night for Buffalo, in company with Father Walsh.

DEFENDING PARNELL AND THE LEAGUE. London, March 20.—At a meeting at Glasgow last night Mr. O'Donnell, Member of Parliament for Dungarvan, in an address repudiated the charges made by Mr. Forster against Mr. Parnell and the Land League. He advocated the organiza-tion of the Irish in England and America for the attainment of tue Irish demands.

OPINIONS OF IRISHMEN IN THIS CITY. Irishmen in New-York of every stamp, Fenians Land Leaguers and Nationalists, were tolerably unanimous yesterday in their views of the attack on Lady Florence Dixie. The general opinion was that Lady Florence was sufficiently respected and liked in Ireland to make it highly improbable that Irishmen had any hand in it; also that the assault had been greatly exaggerated by the English Press and by Lady Florence berself; and that if it had any politscal significance, it was the attempt of a party opposed to Ireland. The remarks made are in brief as follows:

O'Donovan Rossa-It's easy to see through the whole business. If the men meant murder, shure there was her bare throat to stab. It wasn't an Irishman that did it anyway; she has spent too much money in behalf of Ireland to have enemies there.

Patrick Joyce, secretary of the Fenian Brother-hood—Sne's always been a friend to Ireland and she was quite right to showing up the Land League and Pat Egan too. It was the English Government

Captain Murphy, of the Fenian Brotherhood— Lady Florence is a good Irishwoman and so was her mother before her. The whole story is bogus, I

Dr. W. B. Wallace, president of the Parnell Re-ception Committee—I believe Lady Florence knew wast was going to be done and consider at in order to get up a little cheap potoriety for herself. Propably the whole thing was of her own devising. She is a crank, and these cheap attempts to make an impression have been tried before, and I believe this will be found out, as such attempts generally are.

M. J. Breslin, of The Irish Nation-It is the thinnest story ever spread out on paper. The fact is, the English Press is trying by these stories of out-rages to milame the English rabble against Ireland. I think it very doubtfut if any assault was made at all.

MR. CONKLING COMMITTED TO THE TOMBS. HIS FORMER FRIENDSHIP FOR HAVERSTICK-THE MARRIED LIFE OF MR. AND MRS. UHLER.

George W. Conkling, the Government surveyor of Reno, Nev., who shot and killed William H. Haverstick, a mining broker of this city, at the Vienna flats, No. 341 West Twenty-third-st., on Monday night, was committed to the Tombs yesterday by Coroner Levy. Mrs. Emma H. Uhler, his sister, whom he came to this city to reclaim, lay at a late hour at the New-York Hospital last night, still under the influence of opiates, given to stop her paroxysms of hysteria. The body of William H. Haverstick was taken to undertaker's in West Forty-first-st. late in the day. His brother, Joseph B. Haverstick, of Carlisle, Penn., telegraphed that he would arrive in this city this morning to take charge of it. The history of the relations of the persons of this tragedy began in San Francisco about 1870. At that time William H. Haverstick, J. Clement Uhler and George W. Conkling were constant associates. Uhler was at one time teller in the London and San Francisco Bank, and the other two were mining brokers. All of them had money and they spent it freely. Haverstick, who was tall, finely formed, and had dark eyes, was known as "a lady's man." He was active in private theatricals, and associated a great deal with Louis James, James O'Neill and other acrors. At one time he was offered an engagement at $75 a week by "Tom" McGuire, the manager, but he declined it. Unler, a little man, about four years older than Haverstick, fell in love with and married Emma H. Conkling, a bright-eyed, vivacious brunette, on June 10, 1871. George W. Coukling married Miss Lulu

Uhler and his wife hved happily together in San Francisco until early in 1880, when they came East, making their home in Brooklyn. They had two children, Albert C. and Maude, then six and four years old respectively. Another child had died. In May, 1880, Mr. Unler formed a copart-nership with Haverstick, who came to this city about the same time, under the firm name of W. H. Haverstick & Co., and they became members of the American Mining Exchange, Uhler paying $1,100 for a seat for his partner, as he afterward made affidavit. In October, 1880, Uhler and his wife took rooms in this city at No. 154 West Fortyfifth-st. Mrs. Uhler was in poor health, because she was a victim to the opium habit, and her husband introduced Haverstick to her, for the sake of pleas-

She alleged that he had driven her from his home. On October 25, 1881, Mr. Uhler filed an answer, stating the facts already given. He also began proceedings against Haverstick for allenating the affections of his wife, demanding $.5,000 damages. Haverstick was bailed before Judge Sedgwick in $1,000. Both suits were pending on Monday.

George W. Conkling knew nothing of what had been going on. He was in Washington on Government outsiness about two weeks ago, and came thence to this city. He learned that Haverstick was living with Mrs. Uhler, as her brother. He went to her and persuaded her to return with him to his home in Reno, Nev., where, it was thought, no news of the scandal would be known. According to Mr. Hummel. Mrs. Uhler's counsel, brother and sister visited his office last week. Mr. Hummel advised her to go West with her brother. Mrs. Uhler proteased repentance and said that she would be only too glad to get away from Haverstick. In accordance with this understanding, Mr. Conkling went to the Vienna Flats to get his sister on Monday night. Mrs. Uhler pretended to be in mortal fear of Haverstick, and the two men were left in the parlor to discuss the matter. Haverstick, who was a very passionale man, become enraged, seized a statuette weighing four pounds, and hurled it at Mr. Congling's head. The latter then shot his assarant in self-detence, as he afterward told the poince, and delivered himself up at once to Policeman Mantle, in the lobby of the Grand Opera House, with the worse: "I have shot a man. I hope I have not killed him." Mrs. Uhler rushed into the room, on hearing the shots, leli in hysteries and raved so that she was taken to the New-York Hospital and put under the influence of opiates. Dr. Amidon said yesterday that she was "saie."

Coroner Levy empanelled a jury in the case yesterday, took the tessimony of Officer Mantle, at the Drivent and the best to the heavy of the body.

At the Now-York Mining Exchange, which Mr. Uhler and Mr. Haverstick Joined in 1880, it was said that both were extremely well liked there, and that they had appeared friendly to each other. A committee of five, consisting of S. V. White, E. C. Kimball, H. M. Cowies, W. M. Shaw and A. L. Faris, were appointed to draft appropriate resolutions on the death of Mr. Haverstick. A committee of three was chosen to close up his accounts at the Exchange. These were said to be in his layor. His life was insured for $4,000, and this sum probably will be sent to Mr. Haverstick's widowed mother, to whom he was very devoted, at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, where a brother of his also lives.

Mr. Congling is about twenty-eight years old; he is tail and siender, and of an active, impetuous nature. He appeared to be under good self-control yesterday. He is a distant relative of Roscoe Conking. Mr. Uhler has an office as mining broker at No. 7 Broad-st. He has been summoned to appear as a witness at the inquest to-day.

SHADOWING A WOMAN.

EXTRAORDINARY CONDUCT OF A STRANGE MAN-ARRESTED AND FINED.

Mrs. Alice E. Williams, a widow, lives with her daughter, Ada, in a small, neatly furnished room at No. 44 West Twenty-seventh-st. Every time she has ventured on the street in the last week she has observed a tall, muscular man following her. Not knowing of any reason why her footsteps should be dogged, she considered the man's appearance at inopportune moments only strange coincidences. On Monday afternoon she left her home in company with her daughter and began a shopping tour. Curiosity caused her to look for the man, and she was not much surprised to see him close behind her. He had grown bold, however, and stared at her in a manner which frightened her. Throughout all the afternoon, Mrs. Williams says, the man fol lowed her, until, tired of his surveillance, she entered a store in Fourteenth-st, and passed into the street again by an exit on Broadway. She saw no more of the man until about 7 o'clock, when she entered a store at Twenty-fifth-st, and Broadway. On turning to go out she saw him a few feet from her, staring and laughing at her.
"Why do you follow us ?" she asked him.

"I will follow you wherever I please," he an-

Mrs. Williams then threatened to have him ar rested, and he retorted by saying that it would be to her benefit if she did. Thoroughly alarmed, Mrs. Williams entered a Twenty-third Street cross-town car, intending to call on her lawyer, Colonel Spencer. The man sprang into the car after her. Mrs. Williams had only gone a few blocks when she was Colonel Spencer on the sidewalk. She left the car, and, burrying up to him, began to tell him of her adventure. The man followed her and stood with folded arms a few feet from her, staring at her with a sardonic smile.

Colonel Spencer on hearing the story sprang toward him. "You scoundrel!" he said, "how dare you insult this lady?" Surprised at this sudden onslaught, and perhaps frightened at the Colonel's fist, which was passing rapidly before his face, the man, notwithstanding the Colonel's diminutive stature, shrank back but did not answer. The Colonel hailed Officer Nichoff, who

NARROW ESCAPE FROM BLOODSHED.

WALL STREET EXCITED OVER TALK OF A DUEL BE-TWEEN BARON BLEICHROEDER'S SON AND

The narrow escape of Washington Seligman and young Baron Bleichroeder from fighting a duel was one of the chief topics of talk in and about Wall street yesterday. Whether the Baron tendered an apology to Washington, or the son of an untitled capitalist begged the pardon of the exotic nobleman, was not clearly understood. It was only certain from the statements of friends of both persons, that there was not now the slightest danger of a deadly encounter. The principals evidently did not court publicity. TRIBUNE reporters made repeated calls at the offices of Ladenburg, Thalman & Co. and E. L. Oppenheim & Co., in search of them, but in vain. At the office of the former firm, in which the senior Baron Bleichroeder is a special partner, there was a confusion of testimony as to

to fight a duel with him. Why, suppose for a moment that he should touch that high note; that would be the end of his opponent beyond all doubt."

Washington Seligman is a son of James Seligman, of J. & W. Seligman & Co., but at his rather's office no more than at his own could any definite information about the duel be obtained. One of his cousins remarked contemptously: "The idea! two young tellows full of wine and ine. They quarrel at a ball; they make it up when they are sover. That is all there is to the story."

Attired faulticasly in evening dress the young Baron was found last evening sitting in Delmonico's, peaceably supping his chartreuse. Friends were with him, and several of them accosted him with congratuations upon his demeanor under the fire of publicity. The Baron is of medium height, with a handsome, slightly Hebraic cast of countenance, small, dark brown mustache and sharp, black eyes. To a Tribushe reporter who vainly endeavored to interview him on the subject of the difficulty with Mr. Seligman, the Baron repied pointedy but firmly, "I have nothing whatever to say about that matter. It is an entirely private affair."

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

GOVERNMENT AND GENERAL TOPICS. JUDGE FOLGER-APPOINTMENTS-TO BENEFIT PAR-MERS-THE CREEK CIVIL WAR-BRADY'S CROSS

A correspondent of THE TRIBUNE comments apon the unpopularity of Judge Folger with his subordinates of the Treasury Department, which is ascribed to his judicial and careful administration. Several Federal appointments were announced yesterday. Among them was that of Charles R. Sage to succeed Judge White as United States Judge for the Southern District of Ohio. Intelligence has been received that the war among the Creek Indians has grown so serious that action by the Government is demanded. In the Star Route trial vesterday, Judge Wylie ruled out evidence respecting the Price drafts, and the cross-examination of General Brady was resumed.

JUDGE FOLGER'S ADMINISTRATION.

COMMENT EXCITED BY HIS ABSENCE FROM WASH-

Washington, March 20.—The simple fact that Secretary Folger, who has been really ill for several weeks, has followed his physician's advice and gone away for a short time to find needful rest and relaxation has excited an amount of comment wholly disproportioned to the importance of the incident. To jauge by the tone taken by some of the subordinate officers of the Treasury Department, one would say that the Secretary had been guilty of a grave indiscretion, if nothing worse, by presuming to leave the capital without consultation with them, to arrange his itinerary and fix the duration of his absence. When one of these gentlemen was asked a question to-day about the matter he put on an injured air and replied: "I can tell you nothing: the Secretary 'moves in a mysterious way." He did not finish the quotation. In response to the same inquiry, another nigh Treasury official snappishly said: "I don't know where he has gone nor when he will return." If he had added "and I don't care," the inquirer would not have been surprised. The truth is that a very strong feeling of disaffection toward Secretary Forger prevails among his introduced Haverstick to her, for the sake of pleasant compannoship. In the divorce proceedings which came from this in Angust, 1881, Mr. Uhler stated that his wife was cured of her love of opium only to find herself under the uniforme of Haverstick. The latter had become a boarder at their house, which are made to have a same to the place of the sake of pleasant of the sake subordinates, some of whom, high in authority, are restrained from expressions of open disrespect and of course, judical in his methods and does not move rapidly enough to suit some of the brilliant heads of bureaus and divisions, who frequently declare that he is "a slow coach." There is no doubt that Secretary Folger has felt from the day he took office that he had leason to suspect the official fidelity of some of his subordinates and the judgment of others; and this has made him extremely cautions and deliberate. It has also imposed upon him the labor of exercising a closer scrutiny in regard to matters of detail than would have been necessary otherwise. It is scarcely to be wondered that Secretary Folger's health has broken down under the strain and that he requires rest; nor is it very surprising that some of his subordinates are quick to take advantage of the circumstance to indulge in unpleasant comments and innuendoes.

WASHINGTON, March 20 .- The President to-day appointed George R. Sage United States Judge for the Southern District of Ohio, vice William White, deceased. The President has appointed D. B. Russell United States Marshal for the Eastern District of Arkansas, in place of Joseph T. Brown, against whom charges of forgery and perjury in connection with his accounts are pending. The President has designated Paul Strobach to act as United States Marshal for the Southern District of Alabama, vice Osborn, sus-

The Attorney-General has appointed Walter W. Adams, Benjamin B. Foster and Charles A. Hess, Assistant United States Attorneys for the Southern District of New-York. These appointments were made upon the recommendation of District-Attorney Root.

Mr. Sage, who is to succeed Judge White, is a native of Ohio and is about fifty years of age. He was a protogo of Thomas Corwin, with whom he studied and prasticed law, and whose niece he married. He is the head of the law firm of Sage & Hinkle, Cincinnati, and in his profession, it is said, stands second to no member of the Hamilton County bar. He was warmly recommended for the office by the lawyers of Circinnati, and his appointment will be received with general approval by the bar of his native State. Personally ne is very popular. Although not always active in political affairs he has been find is a stanch Republican.

THE WAR AMONG THE CREEKS. A STATE OF ANARCHY-INTERPOSITION BY THE

GOVERNMENT INVOKED. WASHINGTON, March 20 .- Special Agent Towns end, in a communication from the Sac and Fox Indian Agency, under date of March 15, writes to the Commissioner of Indian Affai rs substantially as

In coming from Tulsa to this agency (sixty miles) I found nearly every house and settlement described, and that at a season of the year when every man should be in his field instead of running about over the country with a Winchester rife on his shoulder. A reign of terror prevails throughout this part of the Creek Reservation and appears to have stamped almost the entire population, and it seems to me measures should be adopted to bring the war to a close. I doubt if this can be accomplished without the interposition of the Government, and if this must come it would be a mercy to many innocent persons involved in this trouble if it was done at once, so as to prevent further bloodshed and devastation.

done at once, so as to prevent further bloodsets devastation.

I am aware that these troubles are a test of the Creeks for self-government, but other interests are at stake and other tribes may become involved, either as ensemies or alles. I would not embarrass the Creek Nation in its present struggle for independence and existence; rather would I encourage and support its loyal leaders to the ead that their capacity for self-government may be demonstrated; but it this cannot be done and done quickly I think the public wellare demands that the Government should interiere without delay.

Agent Townsend refers to the fact that armed men from both sides are riding bither and thither all over the country and from trust worthy information he believes them to be without discipline and in a demoralized condition. In conclusion he says:

At best it is a disastrous state of affairs, bad enough if At best it is a disastrous state of a data; and choose contined to the limits of heir own reservation, but when a portion of them earry their campaign into territory not their own, I think it high time some one should interfere and compel them at least to limit their heatile operations to their own country and their own people. This state of affairs affords an excellent opportunity for the many desperators who infest the country to commit depredictions on all sides, and there are indications
